ACHC and APC Focus on Elevating Compounding Pharmacies

CARY, N.C. – Accreditation Commission for Health Care (ACHC) announced today it is renewing its partnership with the Alliance for Pharmacy Compounding (APC), a professional advocacy association that serves compounding pharmacists, technicians, and their patients.

“ACHC and APC are committed to advancing the role compounding pharmacies play in our communities,” said Dr. Jon Pritchett, ACHC Program Director. “This renewed partnership strengthens our shared focus to ensure patients have access to the highest-quality customized medications to meet their specific needs. It is an honor to extend our partnership with APC to enhance the importance of compounding efforts.”

“We continue to see PCAB Accreditation as the gold standard for compounding pharmacies,” said APC Chief Executive Officer Scott Brunner, CAE. “That’s why we’re delighted to partner with ACHC to encourage compounders to undertake accreditation as a means of demonstrating integrity and adherence to the Compounder Code of Ethics.”

The continued collaboration gives APC members exclusive pricing on ACHC Compounding Pharmacy (PCAB) Accreditation. Discounts on ACHCU educational resources also are available.

About APC

The Alliance for Pharmacy Compounding is the voice for pharmacy compounding, representing compounding pharmacists and technicians in both 503A and 503B settings, as well as prescribers, educators, researchers, and suppliers.

Every day, APC members play a critical role in patients’ lives, preparing essential, custom medications for a range of health conditions, including autism, oncology, dermatology, ophthalmology, pediatrics, women’s health, animal health, and others.
