ACHC and HospiceMatch Partner to Support Patients and Agencies

CARY, N.C. – Accreditation Commission for Health Care (ACHC) announced today it is partnering with HospiceMatch, a company streamlining hospice education, discovery, and admission for patients and hospice agencies.

"ACHC and HospiceMatch are mutually dedicated to supporting agencies and elevating quality of patient care," said Susan Mills, ACHC Senior Program Director. "HospiceMatch's platform enables agencies to showcase their services and offers additional tools to reduce admission times, making it easier for patients to connect with providers and receive the care they need."

"We're excited to partner with ACHC to make critical advancements in an industry that impacts millions of Americans annually," said Ralph Haddad, Cofounder at HospiceMatch.

"Our goal is to make the entire hospice journey, from choosing an agency to being admitted, as painless as possible for everyone involved," added Paul Mocer Jr., HospiceMatch Cofounder.

The new collaboration enables HospiceMatch network members to receive preferred pricing on ACHC Hospice and Palliative Care Accreditation or Telehealth Certification. Discounts are also available on select resources offered by ACHCU, the education division of ACHC.

In addition, providers accredited by ACHC are eligible for special pricing on HospiceMatch services and admission tools.

About HospiceMatch

HospiceMatch is a platform dedicated to helping patients find the best hospice providers for their needs. Their mission is to uphold patients' rights, especially the right to choose a provider, ensuring patients are aware of and educated on all their options. The company also builds tools that help streamline the admission process for hospices and referral sources, including document requests, medical record collection, and automated signatures and consents.
